London South Bank University's Table Tennis Academy. The Academy of Sport, Physical Activity and Wellbeing has been developed to link together all the sports related units, both academic and non-academic, within the University and also external partners including English Table Tennis Association (ETTA) and the Sport England funded Central London Proactive Partnership and core services.

By improving the sport and exercise infrastructure at the University, the Academy aims to develop London South Bank as a centre of excellence for sport in the capital. At present, the University has elite sports scholarship programmes linked with local community clubs for Table Tennis.

Talented athletes at the University can apply for scholarships and bursaries up to the value of £3,000, which can be put towards training and competition expenses and can include free access to the University sports facilities and sport science support.

The English Table Tennis Association is the Governing Body of Table Tennis. Brian Spicer is the face of Table Tennis in London, as London Region Development Manager. Goals are to develop a pathway from schools, youth clubs, further education, and Premier Table Tennis Clubs, accredited to Clubmark, to London South Bank University.

Aims are:

- Achieve a network of high quality, accredited clubs with capacity to grow participation
- Achieve a network of high quality specialist facilities
- Train and support a network of volunteers, officials, organisers and helpers to sustain and develop table tennis at all levels
- Provide entry routes, competition, coaching, and leadership opportunities for life time involvement
- Develop table tennis in the workplace
- Assist with strategic, multi-layered, and fully integrated brand marketing and strategy
- Assist a single unified pathway that helps player development
- Add value to the Whole Sport Plan.

Playing to win – A new era for sport.

The Jack Petchey Foundation was established in 1999 to support young people aged 11 –25 living in London and Essex. The aim of the charity is to raise young people's aspirations, enable them to achieve their fullest potential and contribute to society. Jack Petchey OBE believes that engaging in sports like table tennis helps young people to develop physically and socially.
